London Rolling Film Festival Announces AI as Host Topic for This Edition's Panel, Led by Filmmaker Tom Paton

London, UK - 27 July 2023

The London Rolling Film Festival is excited to reveal that Artificial Intelligence (AI) will take center stage as the host topic for this year's edition. Renowned filmmaker Tom Paton will lead the panel discussion, delving into the fascinating intersection of AI and filmmaking.

Scheduled to take place on Sunday, August 13th, 2023, at the prestigious VUE cinema Piccadilly in London, this edition of the festival promises to be a groundbreaking exploration of the impact of AI on the film industry.

AI has been increasingly shaping the world of filmmaking, from advanced visual effects and CGI to data-driven analytics for audience engagement and content creation. The London Rolling Film Festival recognizes the importance of discussing these developments and their implications for the future of cinema.

Tom Paton, an acclaimed director and visionary in the industry, will lead the panel in examining how AI technologies are revolutionizing storytelling, production processes, and audience experiences. As an accomplished filmmaker, Tom Paton is well-equipped to shed light on the opportunities and challenges AI presents to filmmakers worldwide.

"We are thrilled to have AI as the host topic for this year's panel discussion," said Alida Pantone, Festival Director. "Tom Paton's expertise and passion for exploring the cutting-edge intersection of AI and filmmaking will undoubtedly make this a captivating and enlightening event for our audience."

The London Rolling Film Festival continues its commitment to providing a platform for meaningful conversations about the evolving landscape of cinema. The AI-focused panel is set to be a highlight of the festival, sparking dialogue among filmmakers, industry professionals, and AI enthusiasts alike.
